Returning to Active Life After Fall and Continuing Care

“I felt I was in very good hands and everything was explained well– there were no surprises”

The Problem:

The patient developed an extensive pressure ulcer on her back after a fall and initially received treatment at a hospital in her home state. During her care, she moved to the area and needed a provider to continue her care as the wound was interfering with her ability to return to the active social life she had led before her fall.

The Solution:

At our practice, the patient was shown ways to offload and dress her wound, was advised on ways to supplement and explored multiple advanced wound therapies with our providers. After concluding that a wound vac was not compatible with her active lifestyle, we utilized skin substitutes Puraply and Nusheil to heal her wound. By collaborating with the patient, we were able to find treatment options that best fit her lifestyle.

The Remarkable Results:

After 3.5 months, her extensive wounds were healed, and she was able to return to her active lifestyle. She reported that she was “very happy with the result.” After her last visit she headed to the beach. We had healed the wound in time for her vacation plans.

The care was excellent, prompt, and very personable. They were willing to share information with me and willing to explore other avenues for healing if they thought it would work better.”
